Overview: The Air Force Judge Advocate General’s School (AFJAGS), in partnership with the Air Force JAG School Foundation, Inc., is pleased to announce its second annual writing competition for students, practitioners, academics and policy-makers to provide unique perspectives and insights on matters of national security law.

Topic: Autonomous Systems in the Air Force: This year’s writing competition topic encourages scholarship on issues surrounding the implications of autonomous systems in the Air Force. In June 2015, the Office of the Chief Scientist of the Air Force produced a vision document for the integration of autonomous systems into the Air Force over the next 30 years. This document envisions an Air Force where Airmen and autonomous systems work together as a team to meet a variety of challenges currently facing the United States, such as cyber-attacks, anti-access/area denial strategies, and attacks on space-based assets. However, the document also outlines several challenges associated with the use of autonomous systems, to include matters of trust in the reliability and functionality of such systems. Questions of trust have clear legal implications in the domestic and international spheres, as one considers how well an autonomous system will be able to comply with the basic principles of the law of armed conflict or comport with the wide range of privacy rights accorded by the U.S. Constitution. For purposes of this competition, authors should prepare works contemplating the legal challenges associated with the use of both lethal and non-lethal autonomous systems, such as those used for intelligence, surveillance, and reconnaissance, for command and control, or for internal threat monitoring. We encourage papers on any topic directly aimed at the intersection between autonomous systems in the Air Force and national security.

Eligibility: The competition is open to all U.S. and international law school students and graduates. Only original and previously unpublished papers are eligible. Papers prepared for law school credit are eligible provided they are original work. Jointly authored papers are not eligible. Entrants can have others review and critique their work, but the submission must be the entrant’s own product. The name of the reviewing professor or lawyer must be noted on the entry. Members of the faculty of AFJAGS shall not participate in the contest or review any entry on behalf of an entrant. Only one paper may be submitted per entrant.

Format: Entries may not exceed 35 pages, including title page, citations, and footnotes. Entries over 35 pages will be rejected. The text of the entry must be double-spaced, with twelve-point Times New Roman font for body text, ten-point Times New Roman font for citation text, and one-inch margins. Sources must be cited in footnotes according to The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation, conforming to the style found within the pages of The Air Force Law Review. Entrants are encouraged to review past issues of The Air Force Law Review at http://www.afjag.af.mil/Library

Entry Procedure: Each submission must include a separate cover page with the entrant’s name, mailing and e-mail addresses, and phone number. The entrant’s name and other identifying markings must not appear on any other page of the submitted entry. Submissions must be sent via email to afloa.afjags@us.af.mil as a Microsoft Word attachment.

Deadline: Entries must be submitted by 1630 Central Time on 15 April 2017. Winners will be selected and notified by 30 June 2017.

Judging: A distinguished panel of experts will select the winning entries from among those submitted. Judges will evaluate works submitted using standards of quality applicable to traditional academic writing, with emphasis on the following:

- Originality – Does the work break new ground and advance the body of thought on law and policy in the national security arena?

- Organization – Does the work clearly define a problem and present a solution within a logical contextual framework?

- Persuasiveness – Does the work put forth a cohesive argument that is well-supported by reference to authoritative sources?

- Mechanics – Does the work meet high standards of quality in spelling, grammar, and citation format?

Prize: The author of the first-place winning entry will receive a cash prize of $2,000 provided by the Air Force JAG School Foundation, Inc. The author of the second-place winning entry will receive a cash prize of $1,000 provided by the Air Force JAG School Foundation, Inc. All works submitted will be considered for publication in The Air Force Law Review. Although AFJAGS reserves first publication rights for all works submitted in the competition, authors of works not selected for first or second-place prizes will receive notice no later than 31 July 2017 of AFJAGS’ intent with respect to publication of their work. Authors whose works are not selected for publication at that time will be permitted to seek publication elsewhere. AFJAGS reserves the right to make no award in the event that the submitted articles do not meet minimum requirements and standards as determined by AFJAGS.

Republishing Rights: Authors of works selected for publication grant AFJAGS the right to re-publish their articles for two years following the date that AFJAGS provides notice of its intent to publish the author’s work. AFJAGS reserves the right to publish articles in an electronic or hard-copy format and to disseminate them as judged appropriate. Upon the expiration of this right, AFJAGS will seek permission from the author to re-publish the article.
